SUNDAY BAZOO.

SEDALIA, MO.

SUNDAY MORNING, JULY 29, 1883.

IMPROVE THE GOLDEN MOMENTS.

Many young persons lose a great deal of valuable time in waiting for better opportunities and for more convenient appliances for self-improvement. We will suppose our remarks to have especial reference to the opportunities and conveniences for the acquisition of knowledge. Our reason for this is, that we believe there is no one wish so universal among the juvenile portion of the community, as that they may, by some means, become possessed of a good education. In the newest sections of the country, almost the first thing is the school-house and the teacher; and it matters not how far the pioneer has retreated into the wilderness, his dearest wish is that his children may become learned; and among his daily dreams is that he may live to see the high school and the academy and the college in his own locality. There has been so much written about schools, so much praise given to them, and so large a part of legislation devoted to their establishment, and so much money has been voted to their maintenance, that many people now believe that no progress worth mentioning can be made outside of the walls of an institution of learning. And hence there are thousands of young men and women who, for one cause and another, cannot attend school, and are waiting for grand opportunities which, in most cases, never will come of themselves. This waiting is a suicidal policy. In no kind of business does the man or woman of energy wait for more convenient opportunities, or better appliances, but goes right at what is to be done, in spite of all the "lions in the way."

A glance backward at the disadvantages that the farmer, for example labored under forty or fifty years ago in his work, affords an instructive lesson. He was obliged to use a very awkward plow with a wooden mold-board, instead of the polished, easy running iron and steel plow of the present day. He was obliged to reap or cradle all his grain, instead of driving through it with a mower or reaper. He threshed his grain with an old-fashioned wooden flail, instead of the modern threshers that thresh and clean at one and the same time. When he wished to visit his friends in the east or south, after a long separation, it took him months by stage, or perhaps by canal, where now he can accomplish the journey in a few hours.

He had a foreshadowing that there would be great improvements in the next fifty years. But suppose he had sat himself down and waited? His life would have been confined to providing only for each day; the fifty years would have passed and at the end he would have found himself too old to work with the modern plow and the threshing machine, and with no occasion to ride upon the railroad. And so, waiting for these improvements, he has neglected to use such as were within his reach through all the years of lost opportunities. He is poor, decrepit, and sinks from our view, a victim of waiting.

It is thus with those, who, not having good schools and teachers, and appliances for learning—which may be compared to the improved plow, the reaper and the railroad—dawdle away their lives bemoaning their want of opportunities. And when at last the opportunities come, they find themselves too old to improve them. There is the high school that they have been dreaming of now located in the neighboring villages; there are the books and all the appliances for improvement; but those who have been waiting and wishing, are old, and their minds are rusty; and they sink, away, the victims of longing for better opportunities and appliances.

The rule for every young man and woman to improve such opportunities, great or small, as are now presented. Now is the time; and we may safely say there is no day that does not bring with it more or less of opportunity. And there is no one so poor that he cannot in some way become possessed of the necessary books for study and improvement. The great secret of advancement is to seize upon each passing opportunity and improve it. "I will do it!" cries the young man in a burst of enthusiasm, and then he spends an hour thinking about it. One hour lost, young man! Instead of thinking and planning, and dreaming over your resolution, which did not occupy five minutes in forming, why did you not master a lesson in some branch of knowledge in which you are deficient?

Let the young man or woman but enter upon the acquisition of knowledge with the same energy as the competent business man and the energetic farmer enter upon their work, and there would be no waiting for great opportunities and appliances of the latest fashion.

"There is no royal road to learning." A fortune may be acquired by purchase, by inheritance, and may be, as is quite often now-a-days, stolen. But learning is to be acquired only by patient, continuous application. Schools are useful, libraries are convenient, and teachers are a wonderful help; but they are none of them indispensable. A fair endowment of intellectual powers, a few well chosen books, dogged application and perseverance, will achieve for the student what all the wealth in California cannot purchase.

The true secret of success lies in the possession of genius for improving the golden moments to some well defined purpose, instead of frittering them away waiting for opportunities, or in frivolous occupations. Every unemployed moment is an opportunity lost forever; and he who lets them thus slip away, and still expects to become learned, is like the man who expects to become rich by continuously throwing his small change into the sea.

POOR OLD IOWA

The recurrence of lynching in Iowa one of the most prosperous, most orderly and best educated States in the West—is a strange circumstance. It is only a little more than a month since the Barber brothers were taken out of jail at Waverly, in the eastern and thickly settled portion of the state, and hanged by a mob; and now Hardy, who is known as the Polk city murderer, from the place at which his crime was committed, has met the same fate in Shelby county, in Western Iowa. In both cases the mob showed great determination, persistence and brutality. At Waverly, after the outer doors of the jail had been forced open, it took two hours' battering with sledge-hammers and picks to break down the two remaining doors that stood between the mob and the prisoners. As they were taken out, one of them was fairly dragged down the stairway. Hardy narrowly escaped lynching at the time he was captured a few days ago. The capture was a real hunt. Five hundred armed men surrounded the long grove in which Hardy and his fellow murderer were concealed, and closed in, firing as they moved. Hardy was taken unhurt, the other, who was by his own confession the principal, dying of his wounds. Two votes were taken on the subject of hanging Hardy at once, and as the crowd was about equally divided the officers of the law were permitted to take him. Now, however, he has been hanged by my another mob—riddled with bullets, and his body flung into the water.

These things are felt to be especially disgraceful to that section of the country, because they have been almost unknown there, and because they are so repugnant to the ideas that control the people. Iowa has every element of a peaceful and happy civilization. It is noted for the peculiar healthfulness of its climate, the fertility of its soil, its general prosperity, its intelligence, the diffusion of education. The appearance of Judge Lynch in such a community is utterly unnatural. There are sections of the country where it might not seem so on the frontier or in the mining regions, where, in the absence of courts, men sometimes take justice into their hands. But in Iowa, with its 13,000 public schools—! Such an offense against the good morals and the reputation of a state ought not to pass unnoticed. It is not easy to punish a mob, and the same element that joined in a lynching will make a sentiment to justify it. But the rule of law must be sustained. The authorities owe it to themselves to make an attempt to punish the ringleaders, at least, of those who in assuming to punish murder have committed it.

APPLETON CITY.

The Railroad Boom and Other Matters of Interest From that Busy Mart of Trade.

Correspondence of the BAZOO.

APPLETON CITY, Mo. July 28.
—Ned Murrell, the gentlemanly agent of the BAZOO, was in town this week.
—Dr. C. C. Woods, of Kansas City, president of the M. E. church, south, is spending several days in our city.
—R. D. Brown and wife and their accomplished grand-daughter, Miss Lottie Ray, will soon make a visit to Illinois.
—The last issue of the Voice has convinced the merchants of this city of the contemptible manners of John S. Smith, its editor. The Voice has received a large amount of advertising from this place, which, it is safe to say, will not soon happen again.
—The marshal, in attempting to arrest one of our drunken loafers Friday, narrowly escaped being seriously injured. The loafer struck at the marshal with a pocket knife the blade being warded off with a hard, dry ash club. The knife was broken, leaving a part of the blade in the stick. The party's name is Butler, and when he reached the "cooler" he was nearly naked and had a very sore head. So much for whisky. He was fined $5 for being drunk and $25 for resisting the officer.
—At the railroad meeting on last Thursday night, Messrs. Heylman, Wolfe and Irish, of Rich Hill, and Edward B. Fox, secretary of the St. L. E. W. railroad company, were present. The citizens of Rich Hill and Appleton agreed to raise $2,000 to make a preliminary survey from the state line through Rich Hill, Appleton and on to Brownington, in Henry county. The people are thoroughly awake to their interests here, and if the St. L. E. W. company do not do about what is right, the route will be turned over to some other company. We have the inducements to bring a road. Within a few miles of town there are several five-foot veins of coal.

Colored People's Celebration.

Emancipation day, the 4th of August, will be appropriately celebrated by the colored people of Sedalia at Sachers' park, judging from the extensive arrangements being made by them. Hon. J. Milton Turner, of St. Louis, will be present and address the crowd, and other speakers of prominence will also be in attendance. The Colored Masonic Order, Knights of Labor, Brothers of Charity, Temperance Order and Knights of Wise Men will participate in the ceremonies of the day and evening, and the celebration of the ninety-second year of the emancipation of the slaves in the West Indies will long be remembered by the colored people of Sedalia. The Clinton Silver Cornet band has been engaged for the occasion, and will add not a little to the pleasure of the occasion by furnishing excellent music. The committee on arrangements in making everything pleasant and agreeable, and a cordial invitation is extended to one and all to be present.

—The Americans, the new play produced at Hooley's theatre Chicago, June 21 has not created a most favorable impression. However, the piece is being re-written and strengthened and may yet prove a success. Lewis Morrison in the dual role of the Indian twin brothers, one educated and refined, the other hostile, does some fine acting and is received with enthusiasm. Thus far the houses have been fair.

—On Thursday evening the residence of Mrs. Mary Smith was struck by lightning but did no serious damage.
—The room to be occupied by the new bank is fast nearing completion, and will, in a few days, be ready for its occupants.

—The little daughter of J. E. Miller was accidentally shot in the shoulder yesterday evening by George Simpson. It is only a flesh wound and no trouble is anticipated.

—Benj. Stevens who has been in St. John's, Mich., for the past two weeks setting up an estate duty him, returned home Wednesday accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Sarah McMaster, who will remain several weeks.

—The young ladies C. T. U. held a social Wednesday evening at the residence of Mrs. C. B. Davis, and on Thursday they met at the Methodist church at 3 p. m. and re-organized. We hope that they may flourish.

—Jeff. Conner, who was night operator here at the depot for the past three weeks couldn't stand it any longer, so therefore he got sick, and Tuesday evening returned to Sedalia, and we guess to his lady love—how is this Jeff?

—Quite a select crowd of young people gathered at the residence of Mr. Layman, at Ellis, last night to indulge for a few hours in mirthful amusement. The yard was lighted up with Chinese lanterns and presented a grand and striking feature to the lookers-on.

—Verily the Episcopalians of this city are trying their best to erect them an edifice in which to worship. Rev. W. Browne, the minister, is a worker, and one that always delights to be doing something for his people. They will give a concert the first week in September for the benefit of the church.
—Quite an amusing thing occurred last Wednesday, between John Cockerell and Frank Nixon. Frank wanted to sell John's horse, and John said he shouldn't, so John replevined. The case was called before Judge Davis and it was decided in favor of the plaintiff. The defendant took an appeal to the circuit court. Some of the boys have tried for a long time to break up the band, but they cannot succeed.

—The court house yard is in a very deplorable condition at present, and we think it would be a good idea for Sheriff Fisher to have it cleaned off and the gates fixed so as to keep the stock out that is to be seen at any time of the day roaming around in the yard. Can't this be attended to, or does he need a guardian appointed to superintend that part of his duties? Fisher is a good sheriff and one that gives satisfaction to all the people, only in this one thing. Now, sheriff, do attend to this, and that at once.

—The last ball of the season was given last Wednesday night, and the elite of the city was there in all her pomp of dress. It was what was termed a "lawn hop," the ladies wearing lawn dresses and the gentlemen lawn ties. There were several visitors from abroad in attendance and all went merry as a marriage bell until 12 o'clock, when they adjourned to the elegant eating apartments of "Shats," and there each and every one did justice to the many delicacies spread. They tripped the dance till the gray mists of morn warned them that they had to make a stop.

—G. W. Charles, of Metz township, was severely injured the other day, while riding after some cattle. His horse fell with him while at a full gallop, he coming to the ground and alighting on his head. A crowd soon gathered around him and every body pronounced him dead, but on removing him to his home he soon revived, and in a few hours seemed to have gained complete control of himself. At night he was reported much worse, and with very little hopes of recovery. We are glad to say that to-day he is reported as being a great deal better and some likelihood of his getting well.

Swimming at High Altitudes.

Cheyenne (Wyoming) leader.

Tenderfeet should know, and all others should not forget, that it is more difficult to keep afloat in water in this altitude than in a less altitude. That accounts for the numerous cases of drowning even in comparatively small streams. Young men who could swim with facility in the east have found out to their sorrow, and too late, that they could not do the same here. The light atmosphere considerably reduces the buoyant power of water. This is the case to a remarkable degree on Lake Tahoe, the highest body of water on the continent. In this water even pine wood sinks, and when a man is drowned his body never rises.
